

Siemens MES puts medical post graduates in prized position

Talented students rewarded at The Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust

The Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust and Managed Equipment Service (MES) partner Siemens Healthcare, recently rewarded trainee doctors for academic achievements as part of the annual Ron Grimley post graduate scheme.

Dr Ajanta Jayatunga, who chaired the awards and Ian Elsworth, Siemens MES Manager for Dudley, presented the awards for three categories: Best Research Award, Best Audit Award and Best Paper Presented at a National or International Forum Award.

“We strongly believe in encouraging and supporting the talented medical professionals of the future,” said David Cooper, PFI Operations Manager at Siemens Healthcare. “Our role as long-term MES partners with the Trust is a position we take seriously and are delighted to be involved with the Ron Grimley awards for the third year running. These accolades commemorate the work of the former Sub Dean and Vascular Surgeon and celebrate the achievements of current post graduate students.”

Winners of all the categories include: Best Paper Award, Eu Chin Ho and Tracey Toms; Best Audit Award, Ritesh Sah and Samuel Salib; Best Undergraduate, Sanaa Ismail; Best Undergraduate runner up, Alex Smith; and Best Audit Award runners up, Aman Dubb and An-Young Sohn.

The Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust is in its ninth year of an MES partnership with Siemens Healthcare. The vendor independent contract looks after the maintenance, supply and ongoing replacement of all imaging equipment until 2041.
